

CRAMPS, PAINS AND BACKACHE

St. Louis Woman Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Mo. — "I was bothered with cramps and pains every month and had backache and had to go to bed as I could not work. My mother and my whole family always took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for such troubles and they induced me to try it and it has helped me very much. I don't have cramps any more, and I can do my housework all through the month. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends for female troubles." — Mrs. DELLA SCHOLZ, 1412 Salisbury Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Just think for a moment. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use for nearly fifty years. It is prepared from medicinal plants, by the utmost pharmaceutical skill, and superior methods. The ingredients thus combined in the Compound correct the conditions which cause such annoying symptoms as had been troubling Mrs. Scholz. The Vegetable Compound exercises a restorative influence of the most desirable character, correcting the trouble in a gentle but efficient manner. This is noted, by the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms.

Frock and Wrap Straight-Lines

Newer Garments Are Thrilling: the Silhouette Pleasing, Authority Asserts.

Gowns From France Grow More Picturesque, Though Their General Outlines Remain According to Established Precedent.

From the straight-line frock we can't seem to break away—even by way of Paris, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times. Everything that comes across the water does more to accentuate that line, far from stealing into any less favored paths. Don't think for a moment that this tendency to straighten out the silhouette has anything of monotony about it. On the contrary, it seems as though the line had infinite possibilities of development. We think that every known angle has been exhausted, and then—lo and behold! there appears a totally original conception of the same line. The newer frocks are thrilling, that is all there is to it. And the prayer of the American woman, that the straight silhouette at last seems to have its answer always in the affirmative.

Gowns grow more picturesque as time goes on, even though their general outlines remain quite according to established precedent.

The black and white dress follows that liking for the strong contrast of the two colors which is so characteristic of Parisian dresses just now. Only the sleeves and the portion of the bodice from which they spring are of white—white georgette. The rest of the gown is made of a beautiful soft black velvet, trimmed around the bottom of the skirt with chenille lace done into an interesting pattern of decoration.

Cuffs Are Attractive.
The cuffs of the sleeves are, perhaps, the most attractive part of this dress, for they accentuate that width about the lower portions of the sleeves which, just at the present time, adds an indescribable air of smartness to any gown. There are those who predict that the wide sleeve will shortly disappear from fashion's ways—in fact that it has already run its course. But it cannot be said in regard to the newer models that this statement has been in the least way demonstrated. The cuffs seem to be even wider and more picturesque.

Then the French are so pleasant about everything they design. They have actually managed to create long sleeves that really do not get in one's way, and that by reason of the subtle things they do to them. For instance, the ends of the longer sleeves are more apt than not to be decorated with some very heavy trimming on the end of a lightweight material. Now, this weighting does a real service in that it automatically drops back the sleeve as the arm is held up. So, as one reaches for something, one finds that the sleeve is being miraculously lifted from all contact with bric-a-brac along the way, just because the heavy cuff is realizing its own part in the game.

You will find this happening over and over again on the French dresses. Do not be afraid to try wearing one of them, for your imagination has been wrong in picturing their awkwardness. They are so graceful, indeed, that they promptly impel you to throw your arms about in competition with the rhythmic dancers. You become fascinated with the manners of your own sleeves, and it seems interesting to see just how cleverly they will behave.

The sleeves on a coat are made on this same general plan, and with the same subtle reasoning lying behind the manner of their fur edging. Sleeves of this character will be seen on many of the new afternoon coats, and all one can say for them is that they certainly have a way of making the coat about as graceful a garment as has at any time been seen in any wardrobe.

The fact is that the modern coat is running a close second to the gown for interest in design and for general becomingness. In the past there has been some reason to complain that coats were clumsy in appearance or that they ran to the other extreme and were overdone in the way of gingerbread trimmings. But now all of that has been artistically overcome in both directions. The coats and wraps strike that happy medium of design which is so desirable and so filled with charm.

There is no reason why the coat nowadays should not be just as becoming as the frock. Sometimes it is even more so. But it is an inspiring experience for any woman to be able to wear a beautiful gown covered by a beautiful wrap.

The coats are warm, too, by reason of their featherweight and woolen interlinings. There is nothing obvious about woolens in these modern days—nothing too plain and unbecoming. They are all concealed under soft chiffons and silks and velvets and daretynes. But they are on hand none the less to defy any cold breezes and to make the winter weather pleasant no matter what the social occasion. Time was, you know, when if one cared to be interesting looking in winter then one made up one's mind to freeze gently but willingly. There was no chance for gracefulness combined with warmth. But now all that has changed, and the more delicate a wrap looks the more one may be sure that it has tucked away in its innards some fairly paddings that guarantee it for winter.

Of Heavy Black Satin

One of Drecol's coats is made of heavy black satin, and for its lining there is all that "extraneous" we have just been describing. The fur about the neck and sleeves is gray, the embroidery which is concentrated on the sleeves is also done in gray, and the lining, to repeat the general color scheme, is a soft gray crepe.

This desire for black and gray has become a general one during this present winter season. In all sorts and conditions of wraps and ways the union of the two colors is demonstrated. Really, one feels out of the general running if one has not at least one costume made of these two colors. Each of them seems to give life to the other, and it may be said that seldom has a combination of two shades become so generally flattering.

The black coats trimmed with caracul or squirrel or any of the other gray furs are much in demand. The blacks are those materials which have thick, heavy naps, and which by reason of this texture manage to look so much blacker than the usual blacks. There is nothing dingy or dull about their surfaces, for they shine and glitter in the sunlight, raising them completely out of the funeral class. Black of this character does not seem to be black, but is really a color, especially when it has some gray surfaces to show it in delightful contrast. Then there must always be considered those gray stockings with black shoes, which do so much to accentuate the color scheme by repetition. And gray suede gloves are just about as good as anything that has ever been popular for the covering of the hands. They are much more in key than white ones could be and not nearly so difficult to keep looking the pink of perfection.

Color in these afternoon wraps is not so greatly in evidence as might have been imagined from advance reports. Still, one sees coats of deep purple, and those of the reddish tones which are awfully good looking. A deep red Kasha cloth cape, trimmed with wide collar and cuffs of caracul, is an interesting importation. And a purple velvet wrap made very full and spacious is trimmed with lavish bandings of dyed squirrel.

A Big Reduction.
A certain young man, who was ambitious to shine in the newspaper world, did not last very long on the paper in a Western town that gave him his chance.

He was assigned to "cover" a fire in a group of ice houses near town. After telling how they went up in flames, he inserted this statement in story:

"Accordingly twelve hundred tons of ice were reduced to ashes."

Knowledge.
Edward, age four, fell and hurt himself and his mother fully expected him to cry, but was agreeably surprised when he did not.

"Oh, you are a little man, aren't you? Men don't cry," said his mother.

"No, but they cuss," Edward said, knowingly.
